CHINESE NEW YEAR 2027

Sea & Air freight | Import from Asia

Plan your sea and air freight from Asia well in advance

As Chinese New Year approaches on 6 February 2027, it's a good idea to plan accordingly. Most factories typically close one week before the festivities and may remain closed for 1-3 weeks afterwards.

The holiday affects both production and transport. Factories may close before the festivities, and reopening is often delayed. This can affect cargo pick-ups, capacity and departure schedules. Suppliers' holiday periods vary, so please confirm the dates directly with them.

Our recommendations

SEA FREIGHT

- Book space at least four weeks before the planned departure, preferably earlier.
- Confirm with your supplier the last production day, when the goods will be ready, pick-up arrangements and required documentation.
- After the holiday, factories may reopen and collections may resume at different times.

AIR FREIGHT

- Capacity can be tight around the holiday and varies by route and booking time.
- Contact us as soon as you know when your shipment will be ready for pick-up. Please include the dimensions, gross weight, number of packages and required delivery date.
- For urgent shipments, we can advise on air freight or a sea-air solution.

What you can do now

- Confirm your supplier's last production day and expected reopening date.
- Avoid placing orders at short notice, and try to reduce last-minute orders.
- Share expected volumes and critical delivery deadlines with FREJA.
- Let us know in advance which goods may require a faster solution.
